

15 May 2009, Henley on Thames

Leading Hospitality IT player becomes IndiCater's Chairman

Charles Mobbs FIH, has been appointed Chairman of Indicater, the web-based hospitality management software specialists. Mobbs is well known in the hospitality industry having spent the previous 24 years working for IT firm Fretwell Downing Hospitality, as Sales Director and latterly as Managing Director.

Mobbs said, "I am joining Indicater at a really exciting time in their development. I have watched their growth and development with interest over the years since they established in 2000 and they have a strong offer for a wide range of hospitality clients. I am really looking forward to using my experience of strategically developing new markets and client services in hospitality IT to help Indicater's innovative team grow the company.

"Having now moved on from a long career with Fretwell Downing, I wanted to use the skills I have developed to help another company reach their full potential and the opportunity to become Chairman of Indicater is a perfect fit for us all."

Mike Day, Indicater's Chief Executive said, "Charles' appointment is an exciting move for us. He is a really experienced player in this industry with a reputation for excellent client service and creative IT solutions. Indicater has grown a great deal over the years and Charles' experience and input will be very beneficial to help us get to the next stage in our evolution. For our customers, this appointment also confirms that Indicater are investing in the future of the company and the quality of the services it supplies. Our ambition is to be viewed as the best hospitality IT provider and Charles' appointment is another milestone on that journey."